It's time to be finished with all of the frivolous lawsuits against Microsoft - one of America's finest companies. The most recent filing by AOL/Time Warner - through its subsidiary, Netscape Communications Corporation - is absurd. Enough is enough.. these lawsuits are blatant attempts by the parties filing suit to "share" in Microsoft's financial success because they are greedy and incapable of honorable competition.

As a consumer, I have both IE and Netscape browsers. I use them both - depending on my mood. I have never been forced to use one or the other. If one cannot follow instructions for choosing the primary browser, perhaps one should amuse oneself with activities that don't require a computer.

As a taxpayer, I am outraged at the "legal" shenanigans - or circus, if you prefer - and the expenses that will be passed to the citizens of our great country. I believe there are far more pressing issues for the DOJ to handle at this most crucial time in our history.

Sincerely,

A. C. Poh
